Lies, Love and Hitler

"A delicately textured work... the interwoven stories are balanced brilliantly...
The great strength of this play, however, lies in the story it tells and the way it is told."

Dr Paul Langley, age 39, is slightly mad. Like most academics, he has a very good brain - it's just that he thinks it's a little out of whack - mainly because he keeps seeing visions of Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the dead man whose life and work he's been studying for years. Langley finds himself in trouble when he falls for one of his students and finds she has a secret which threatens to destroy them both. The question is... what will Bonhoeffer say about it?
